

Module 7

Classmates told me to consider widening the window of where I wanted my content on each page. They also said to maybe try out a centered heading. Mostly, my design choices were unanimously liked. The people I spoke with like the simplicity of my designs, and the contrast of colors on the pages. They seemed to agree that the pages would be easy to use once they were a website.

Based on what they told me, I chose to widen the area of my content and I also centered my heading like they had suggested, and ended up liking my name centered better. I did think the review was helpful. It was nice to get a second opinion on my design choices since I was only used to judging them based on my own opinions. For future reference, I'll be able to think about things they said about my design choices. I'll keep in mind other usability critiques they gave others and apply it to my own designing.
